Equipping farmers to build resilient farms and communities.

Blog: "Precision Conservation Analysis: Can Habitat Outperform Row Crops?"

In part two of his blog series, Brad Woodson, PFI habitat viability manager, shares how he determined whether habitat could outperform row crops by considering factors like cost of production, yield and commodity price for his own farm.

If doing your own calculations feels daunting, don't worry! Brad shares how precision conservation analysis, provided through our partnership with Pheasants Forever, can help. Learn how it works.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Winter webinar: "Trees and Bees: How Agroforestry Benefits Insects and Farmers"

Tuesday, March 26 | Noon-1 p.m.

Planting trees on your farm has a host of benefits, from providing habitat and nectar for pollinators to buffering your farm from wind and pesticide drift.

In this week's webinar, Ann Novak and Sally McCoy will discuss the woodlots and pollinator plots they have put to use on their farm. Zach Burhenn, of Iowa Native Trees and Shrubs, will offer tips on site and species selection, long-term maintenance and more. RSVP

Join us for our Spanish-interpreted goat farming series

Saturday, March 30 | 10 a.m.-Noon | Red Oak, IA

PFI and the Center for Rural Affairs are thrilled to announce the continuation of our Spanish-interpreted "Year in the Life" series in 2024.

This season, join us as we follow Jenny Horner and Emilio Moreno from Red Oak, Iowa, who will lead our first in-person session on March 30, and Adam Ledvina from Tama, Iowa, in a year of raising, grazing and marketing goats. View details and register.

Connect with field crops farmers in northern Iowa

Thursday, April 11 | 5-7 p.m. | Northwood, IA

Join Troy Benjegerdes at Worth Brewing Company for a field crop farmer social. Conversation topics will be centered around marketing small grains, but all farm-related discussions and stories are welcome!

Troy farms 225 acres near Manly, Iowa. When not busy with software engineering and farming, he works on building a solar tractor.
